Pioneers in memorial jewellery

Atlantis Memorials has been an established name as a designer and manufacturer of wedding rings since 1980. After persistent requests from relatives to make memories tangible, the Dutch company was one of the first to enter the market for memorial jewellery in 2000. With subtly designed ashes chambers, a symbolic amount of ashes could be carried inconspicuously. Now, some twenty years later, the perfect finish with an eye for design and details is still central. "Our memorial jewellery is made by hand by the best goldsmiths", adds founder and designer Jan Renes. "Varying from ash jewellery and fingerprint jewellery to ash beads and rings, but always pure craftsmanship and using first-class materials."

For example, all memorial jewellery is cast in precious metal, making it robust and heavy." All this in a contemporary and timeless design, with attention and care, so that relatives can carry their beautiful memories with them for as long as possible.

ASH PENDANTS

Very close to the heart...

When you have had to say goodbye to a loved one, the beautiful thoughts you have of him or her live on. Memories you want to embrace and cherish in a way that feels right to you. With an ashes pendant from Atlantis Memorials, you carry the memory of your loved one close to your heart forever.

These pendants can be filled with a symbolic amount of ashes. Inconspicuously incorporated in a contemporary design, not immediately recognisable as an ash container. After all, your memories are personal and you'd rather keep these to yourself.

with fingerprint

A personal memory...

Ash jewellery combined with a fingerprint is the most personal thing you can carry with you. Using a special laser, the fingerprint is engraved deep into the jewellery. In this way, a high-quality print can be achieved.

In addition, each piece of jewellery is provided with an extra layer of silver or gold for finishing and reinforcement. The end result is an authentic, graceful and personal piece of jewellery.

FINGERPRINT Scanner

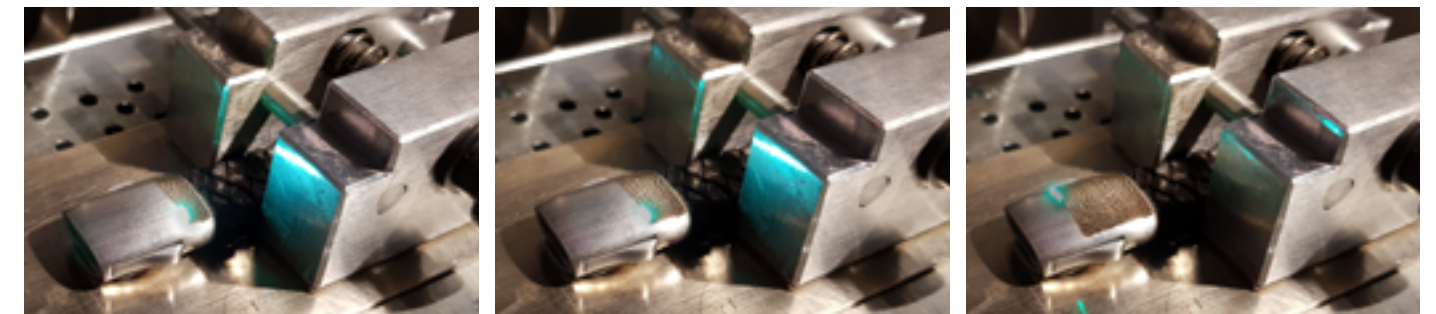

Digital fingerprints

The HF 7000 Fingerprint scanner distinguishes itself through its ease of use and quality. Due to its streamlined design, lightweight and small size, the scanner easily fits in your pocket, making it easy to take it with you to the desired location.

The scanner is easy to use by connecting it to a smartphone via a Bluetooth connection. When the device is connected to the Fingerprint scanner, a high-quality print of a finger can immediately be made. Within a few seconds, the sensor of the scanner makes a copy of the finger in 508 DPI, which means that the scanned print is suitable for an extra deep engraving in a piece of jewellery. In this way, a high-quality print can be achieved.

The end result is a total solution for fingerprinting. A cleaner solution than the more traditional methods no longer requires the prints to be sent physically. A technique provided with easy-to-use software, in which a fingerprint can safely be used multiple times and be retrieved at a later time.

The Fingerprint scanner is available through Funeral Products, the exclusive distributor of Atlantis Memorials.

Filling instruction

The ash-containing jewellery of Atlantis Memorials is provided with a small sunken screw or seal cap. This can be located at the bottom, side or back of the jewellery. Ash jewellery can very easily be filled by yourself. By scanning the QR code below with your phone, you can see how best to fill your jewellery.

Ash jewellery with sunken screw

All tools that are used in the filling instruction video are part of a professional filling kit, available at our exclusive distributor. This is, among other things, equipped with special screwdrivers, with which the jewellery can easily be opened and closed. It could be the case that the ash may be too coarse to fit into the jewellery. In that case, you can make it a bit finer by using a mortar and pestle, for example. If necessary, you can press the ash down with a wooden toothpick.

Ash jewellery with seal cap

Ash jewellery with a seal cap should also be placed upside down on a soft surface. After filling, the seal cap is pressed into the opening, which will create a vacuum. As a result, the ash chamber of the jewellery is sealed and can no longer be opened.

Origin of the precious metals

Atlantis Memorials attaches great importance to doing business on a socially responsible level. With this, we as a company want to pave the way within our industry. Together with our smithy, we pay close attention to the origin of our precious metals. This prevents the use of materials from countries or regions where conditions are at odds with human rights or harmful to the environment. Atlantis Memorials, therefore, not only supplies beautiful but also responsible jewellery.

Made under good conditions

Making jewellery is a profession in itself that requires years of experience, precision and patience. The Thai smithy we work with realises this craftsmanship all too well and cherishes its employees. Investments are made in good working conditions, whereby the workspaces are provided with plenty of light and air conditioning. Additionally, workers in the smithy work up to 8 hours a day and receive an above-average salary.

Origin of minerals

Atlantis Memorials has a procurement policy in which it only trades with suppliers who act based on the OECD guidelines or in accordance with the standards of the Responsible Jewellery Council. This ensures that all parties involved in the chain work in a responsible manner and together we prevent a contribution to the violation of human rights or financial abuses.

Quality guarantee

The route from Thailand is long. To guarantee that the memorial jewellery has survived the journey, it will be checked again as soon as it arrives in the Netherlands. This extra check is carried out by goldsmith Arjen Lemmens. Every piece is explicitly checked by Arjen on quality, purpose and aesthetic value. To guarantee a perfect, high-quality piece of jewellery. Following this final quality check, each piece of gold jewellery is additionally inspected at the Assay Office WaarborgHolland, to verify the gold content. Atlantis Memorials thus guarantees a responsible product of high quality.

Consciously doing business together

Atlantis Memorials has an exclusive partnership with Funeral Products. A reliable partner, who has laid down its working method in a Code of Conduct. A Code of Conduct that helps the company make ethical decisions. Funeral Products is very selective in its choice of producers and suppliers. The company only works on a partnership basis. For example, Funeral Products demands fair wages and good, safe workplaces from all partners they work with. In addition, the company expects everyone it works with to provide a protected and safe production environment, free from child labour and slavery. By working with memorial items that are manufactured under good conditions, Funeral Products guarantees fair production of high quality. Societal standpoints that fit seamlessly with Atlantis Memorials' corporate vision.

A better world

Funeral Products supports local initiatives at home and abroad that improve the living environment. Together with them, we support the Thai Child Development Foundation (TCDF) from Thailand. The TCDF supports children with physical, developmental or learning disabilities, but also children who grow up in extreme poverty or are suffering from social problems. Teachers are the eyes and ears. They notice if, for example, a child does not come to school, does not have food with him or has bruises. When a report comes in, one of our local volunteers goes out to see how we can offer help, in close consultation with the local village heads and the parents or guardians.
