

KEEPING THE MEMORY ALIVE

KEEPING THE MEMORY ALIVE

Giving loved ones a lasting memory, that is what we strive for every day. A memento that feels good, that fits the spirit of the times and that knows how to characterise a loved one like no other. Innovation is central to this. To be able to respond optimally to the changing needs of the market, we listen, think along and work closely with the profession. Constantly looking for new techniques, materials, and possibilities to keep that special memory alive.

Involved and aware

Attention to the world around us is paramount in everything we do. This starts with a conscious purchasing policy, the use of mostly natural processes and pure raw materials, and our choice of suppliers. Involved partners who invest in the highest possible quality. Suppliers who care about their employees, who protect local production environments and work according to environmental guidelines.

Attention for people

Our involvement can also be found within the business processes of the organization. From reusing packaging materials and combining orders to minimize the number of transport kilometres, to simply printing fewer e-mails. Working meaningfully and responsibly, with an eye for all human aspects within and outside the organization, from raw material to the transfer to the loved ones.

In addition, we not only look critically at our own role in the world, but we like to go the extra mile. We support many local, national, and global social initiatives and support them in various ways and with several means. With this, we hope to make the world just a little better and more beautiful.

Our promise

The way in which we commemorate our loved ones is constantly changing. We are increasingly looking for a personal memory. One that knows how to reflect the details of a loved one's way of life, and one that is in line with the way we want to remember our relatives. Funeral Products helps with that.

My name is Michael Brooks and since mid-2016 I have been working within Funeral Products as Director of our UK and Ireland Businesses. With over twelve years of experience as a Sales Manager, I have gained broad expertise in supporting Funeral Directors with their product management with families and business development, account, and sales management for my client's organisations.

In early 2016, I met Peter Biemans, CEO of Funeral Products. His unique views on running a company, but more importantly, his actions to truly implement Corporate Social Responsibility into every fibre of the business made the decision to work with Peter very easy for me. Later that year, I made the transition by moving from Toronto, Canada to London, England. To be able to assist you locally, but also to be able to respond adequately to your needs we soon set up the London office. Early on I set the personal goal of supporting Funeral Directors with new business, yet personal, strategies, that meet today's family's needs, but might seem unconventional in this sometimes very traditional sector.

To complement our already complete range of high-quality and guaranteed delivery of family-ready products, we also offer additional insights to the market with a focus on helping the family understand their options through an educational, not a sales approach.

Our new "What to do with the Ashes" leaflet is just one example of how we aim to engage and educate the family on their options, showcasing products paired with insights on what might be best given the situation, without being too intrusive.

Together with you, we build a bond of trust with Families, through our partner Funeral Directors, providing families more options than they often knew were possible. After all, today's family wants access to information and to be given the power of choice. In a world that is rapidly changing more than we have experienced before, today, more than ever, we have the same goal, namely, to provide families and relatives with a loving, lasting memory.

FP-ORIGINALS FROM SKETCH TO URN

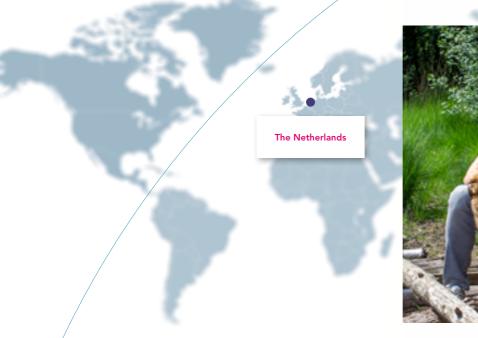

Innovation, creativity, and sustainability form a perfect combination in the FP-Originals collection. A special line of products that have been sketched, designed, and produced by Funeral Products, in collaboration with its own designers. Memorial items that find their inspiration in the artistic aspects of 'Dutch Design'. A modern style that is combined with the wishes and experiences of loved ones.

"As a leading supplier of funeral and memorial products, we want to know where our belongings come from," says owner Peter Biemans. "What is the origin of the raw materials? What else does a company do to reduce its CO² footprint? And are employees and their families treated and rewarded appropriately? To get a better grip on this ourselves, we have developed our own patented collection. We constantly try to be innovative in this regard; listening to the market and responding to needs, trends, use of colour, function, but above all to sustainability and efficiency.

The products from the FP-Originals collection are produced in all from over the world. "Of course, we look at the origin of materials," continues Peter, "but also at local craftsmanship. Moreover, we work closely with local partners, and we support local initiatives. All of this is not very complicated, but just a matter of doing and granting someone else, whatever you grant yourself."

Peter Biemans, Owner

Made with love and craftsmanship

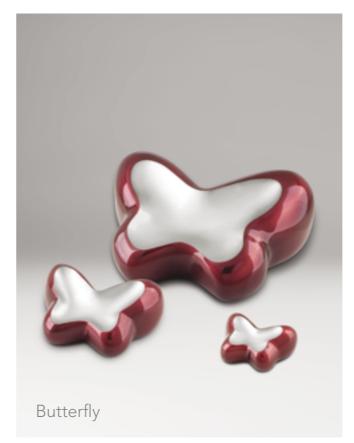

A sublime design, high-quality finish and craftsmanship come together in our Odyssee collection. Made by local craftsmen from India from solid materials such as brass and aluminium and provided with a special lacquer layer that gives the product its shine and long-term protection. This way you have a high-quality and above all an honest product in your hands. Made with love, to help cherish those who are no longer with us.

A natural choice

The Celest urn is also available in a biodegradable version. Made from various types of organic clay. A beautiful, sustainable alternative for next-of-kin, suitable for both a natural funeral and a funeral at sea. The heart of the organic Celest urn is made from ceramic. Serving as an extra keepsake, in which a symbolic amount of ashes can be stored. Thus, one has a small, lasting memento of a loved one. Even long after the last goodbye.

GreenLeave

The GreenLeave foundation focuses on making sustainable, green funerals more accessible. The association tests funeral related products against strict sustainability criteria, so that families have access to a reliable overview when organising a sustainable farewell.

The Celest Bio urn meets these requirements and proudly carries the "GreenLeave Approved" label.

CERAMIC MASTABA

The ceramic factory of the Sikorski family is located in Suchy Las, Poland. A place where craftsmanship is passed on from generation to generation, and where contemporary design and tradition meet.

"Every urn here is still made by hand using a traditional casting method," says Rafał Sikorski, owner of Mastaba with pride. "A process that starts with creating a unique design, which is then worked out in a model drawing. Based on this, we make a plaster model that serves as the basic shape for all other products. The liquid clay is then poured into the casting mould and then left to dry. When the clay has hardened enough to work, we smoothen the surface and bake the urns at 900 °C.

Finally, we apply a glaze layer before baking the urns once again, but this time at 1,050 °C." The entire process takes approximately 4 to 8 days, depending on the type of paint required, and no machine is involved.

"We work with love for the profession, passion for the material and, above all, a lot of attention to detail," Rafał continues. "From casting the moulds to painting the urns." Sustainability is central to this. Only high-quality, environmentally friendly materials are used, and all "residual waste" is separated and, where possible, even reused. All this results in a beautiful and meaningful urn line in every way. From classic to modern, but always with intense colours and an eye for details.

METAL & MDF TERRYBEAR URNS & MEMORIALS

Each Terrybear Urn is unique. Made with compassion, dedication and creativity from brass, aluminium, and other high-quality metals, but also from MDF. Exclusive designs that are special and above all distinctive.

"It all started with Terry, his delivery truck and a pile of stuffed animals. Terry Commerford, our founder, is an entrepreneur at heart. Years ago, he started selling teddy bears and other stuffed toys somewhere on the street corner," begins CEO Lavina Lau her story. "Terry's entrepreneurial spirit and enthusiasm are contagious to the rest of the Terrybear staff. The company expanded into a supplier of interior decorations. Over time we discovered that one of our brass ginger jars was used as an urn.

This development made us think, after which we developed an exclusive collection of memorial products for the funeral industry. The beginning of Terrybear Urns & Memorials.

Now, years later, we are no longer just a company that sells urns but have expanded to a 'one-stop-shop' for funeral services. We offer them special, exceptional products, services from innovative digital solutions that further innovate the funeral industry.

As a team, we are constantly developing, with the focus on offering quality products and services, managed by specialised employees. A foundation that summarizes everything that we do at Terrybear. To inspire and help funeral specialists, who in turn can provide optimal service to families and loved ones."

CERAMIC GEERT KUNEN

Artist Geert Kunen has been creating ceramic artworks for more than 40 years. He masters this material like no other and gives every design and every urn the attention it deserves. It is sculpted by hand, which means no object is the exact same. They are finished with a liquid layer of bronze or silver, which provides a beautiful finishing touch. This is a craft that he has passed on to his sons Roel and Rob; who make the urns together with their father in his own studio.

Because of the unique details, contemporary shapes and thoughtful symbolism, Geert's creations are not immediately recognized as an urn, but as a piece of art. "I give shape to my creations from a deep inner feeling," says the artist.

"This way, you can get a personal message or reminder from every urn. Examples include the sunflower, which symbolizes zest for life and admiration, and the guardian angel, who metaphorically watches over a loved one."

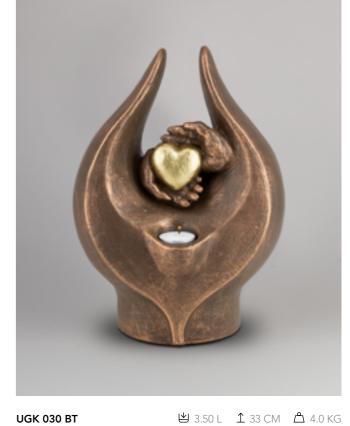

Sustainability is also important to the artist: "I only work with natural clay and environmentally-friendly water-based varnish and bake the urns in an electric oven with zero emissions. Moreover, I use second-hand boxes and recycled filling material as packaging." All this makes every ceramic urn from Kunen a meaningful product, made with heart, soul, and salvation.

Consolation urns

In addition to the regular urns, the artist designs small ceramic artworks, called 'Consolation urns'. Geert Kunen explains: "Losing someone is a major event, especially as a child. Consultation urns allow children to keep a small, lasting memory of their loved one. And are therefore a loving remembrance that helps in the grieving process."

CERAMIC URNENATELIER SCHOONHOVEN

Love for the profession, attention for the material and a traditional method come together in Urnenatelier Schoonhoven. The place where Ber van Reden has been making beautiful ceramic urns since 1984.

Ber van Reden: "Every urn that leaves our studio is completely handcrafted. For example, we still model the clay in the traditional way, using a turntable. When the basic model is ready, it is left to dry for three weeks and afterwards is baked three more times at temperatures up to 1,250 °C. That makes the urn extremely robust and durable. The whole process, from a lump of clay to final urn, takes about four weeks and is done all by hand; from modelling to glazing and painting.

By only using high-quality clay and due to the intensive baking process, the urns, if properly maintained, are extremely suitable for placing outside or in a columbarium. But they are also at home in any indoor interior indoors. Especially because you cannot immediately recognize that it is an urn."

In addition to the unique urns in striking metallic colours,
Urnenatelier Schoonhoven also makes special 'Cuddle Stones'. "These small, handmade stones can be filled with a small amount of ash and can be taken anywhere," as van Reden continues his story. "Due to the unique production process, the Cuddle Stones are extremely durable and wear-resistant. That is why they will not simply tear or break if they accidentally fall. In addition, just like the urns, they are suitable for outdoor use.
In this way, the lost loved ones are always tangible

CERAMIC POTTERY BONNY

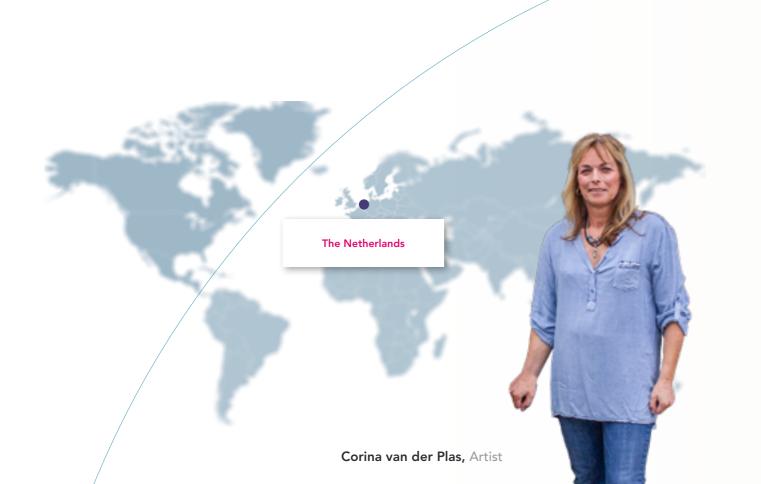

The ceramic urns by Corina van der Plas tell a story. The story of an artist who was asked one day if she wanted to make a memorial stone. A decision she has not regretted to this day and which resulted in a beautiful, very personal urn line.

"My love for pottery originated more than twenty years ago," says the artist. "It appealed to me so much that I started following a special training with Dick Blacquiére.

A master of the craft who introduced me to the secrets and beauty of creating with clay. After first having made various gifts and consumables, I was asked if I could also make a memorial stone. I had to think about that for a moment, but in the end, I thought it was a beautiful concept to be able to contribute to something so personal.

Unfortunately, I have experienced it first-hand when my father passed away and my mother asked me if I wanted to make the urn. It was very special to be able to do that. The reactions were so positive that in the end, I eventually made it my job."

Pottery Bonny has since grown into a wonderful, company, in which an eye for the environment is very important. "The clay I work with is a 100% natural product. Both the waste from the clay and the clay water are reused and the varnish and glazes are lead-free and therefore not harmful. With all of this, I contribute to the bigger picture in my own small way."

CRYSTAL MEMORY CRYSTAL

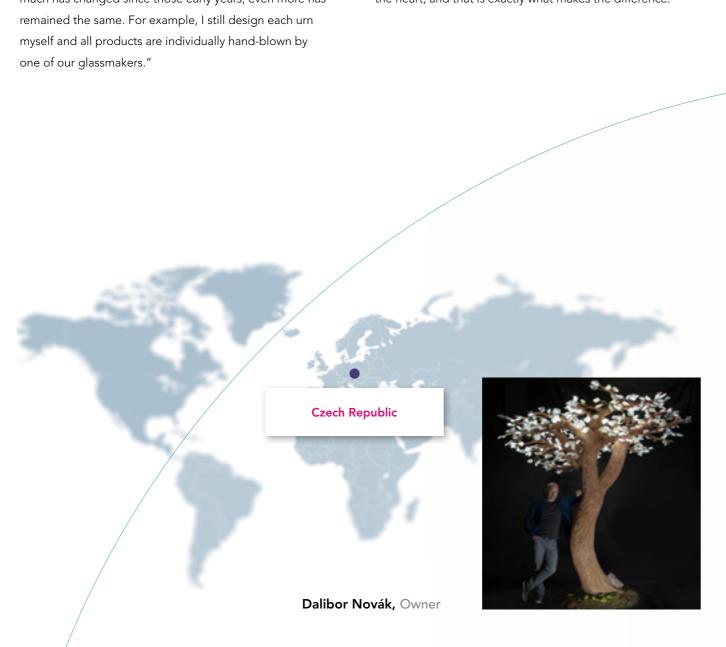

"Bohemian crystal" is a concept worldwide. This rating is given to glass with such a high lead content that it has the ability to shine like a diamond. The Memory Crystal urns are no exception.

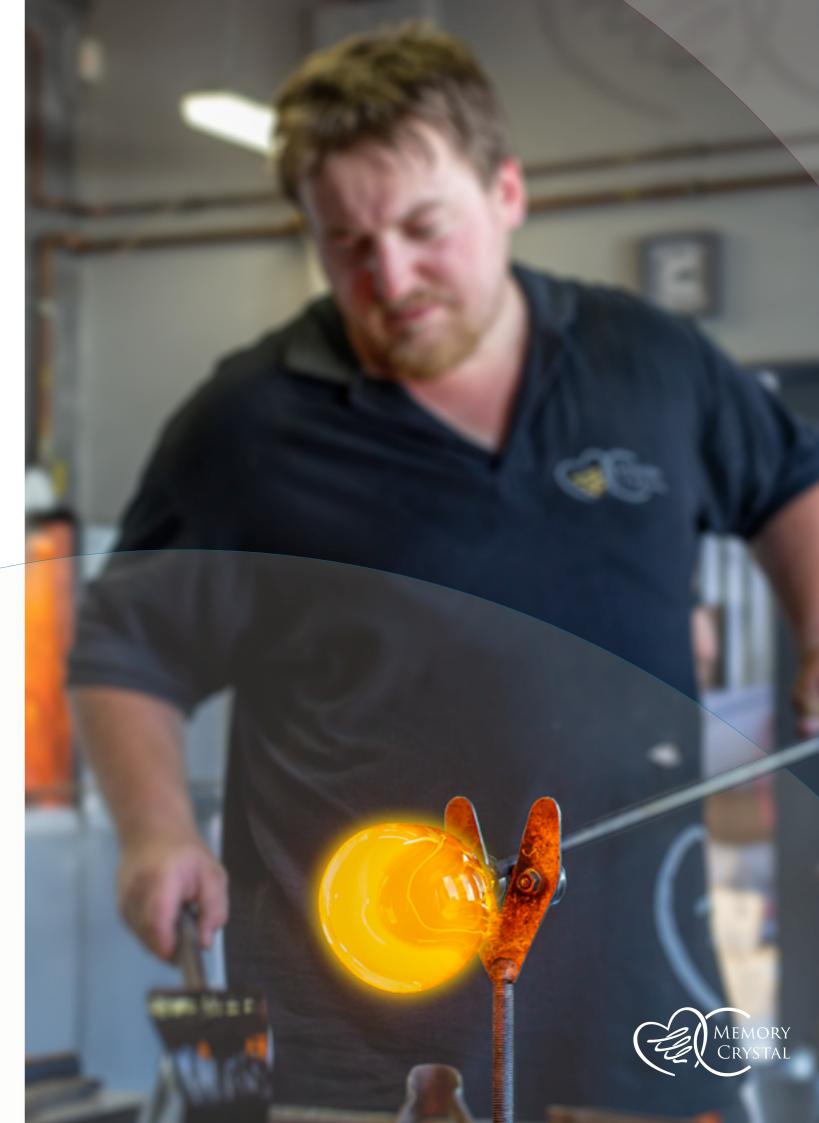

"A few years after graduating as a glass artist, I was looking for a new business concept," says Dalibor Novák, founder and owner of the Czech company. "At that time, in 1999, the range of funeral products was quite limited and very conservative. I saw opportunities in this and soon thereafter I started my company. We now work here with sixteen employees and the demand continues to grow. And while much has changed since those early years, even more has remained the same. For example, I still design each urn myself and all products are individually hand-blown by one of our glassmakers."

Ancient "craftsmanship", which to this day is still regarded as a special and difficult technique to master. The production methods of no less than six different crafts in total come together in the urns. As a result, each urn has its own specific, unique details, without deviating from the basic model.

"Average is not good enough for us," Novák continues.

"We only want to offer loved ones the highest possible quality, so we only use the best raw materials. We use the latest technologies and employ the most experienced and skilled glassmakers. But above all, we make our urns from the heart, and that is exactly what makes the difference."

Urns that shine

FIBREGLASS MENGLA

Solid materials, characteristic shapes and expressive colours come together in the Mengla urn collection.

A Vietnamese company that not only has an eye for the end result, but also for the way in which the urns are made.

"After I graduated in International Business in 2008,
I wanted to see the world," says Jean-Michel Adam.
"Experience a country and discover new cultures, and so I ended up in Vietnam, where I was drawn to the handwork and crafts. This was the start of Mengla, a family business that currently has twenty employees." The production of the Mengla urns is an intensive process, that mainly consists of the very laborious varnishing, which is an ancient craftsmanship in Vietnam.

"The most interesting part of the production process is not the fibreglass itself, but the varnishing of the urns", Jean-Michel continues. "For example, we have to apply several layers of varnish and wait 24 hours between each layer until it dries. The entire process takes no less than 10 days."

The company is of course careful with the people who work there. The employees can count on relatively high salaries and can decide for themselves whether they want to work overtime. Additional hours in the evening or on Sunday are of course rewarded extra. A certificate showing that no use is made of child labour is self-evident. With all this, you have a product that is not only made with care but also feels good in every other way possible.

BIO URNATURE

Urnature was born from a dream. A dream that arises from a family with a passion for nature, ecology, and sustainability, and successfully combines this with the need to bring innovation and improvements to the funeral industry.

"All urns are made by hand by artists who love and understand their profession," says commercial director Margelys Ramil. About a quarter of a century later, she and her husband Nelson continue the legacy of her parents; pioneers in making high-quality biodegradable urns, made from different types of 100% organic clay.

"During the production process, the two halves of the model are made from purely natural elements. Both halves are then reassembled using the same materials and organic glue. That means that all our products serve their purpose optimally."

The bio urns from the Urnature collection have not only been developed with the minimum possible ecological footprint but also form a combination of exclusive quality and design. They are suitable for a natural funeral as well as for a funeral on the water, as they have an opening at the bottom that is covered with recycled cardboard. As a result, it fills up slowly when dropped in water and the urn will gradually sink to the bottom.

BIO LIMBO

Doing business with respect for nature and with an eye for craftsmanship. That is what characterizes the Spanish company Limbo. That is why almost all bio-urns are made by hand, using only raw materials of organic or mineral origin.

Founder Jordi Requena says: "My family owned a small funeral company. We had a successful and above all personal company, but at the same time we wanted to take new steps and we looked for new possibilities to improve the customer experience. We soon started producing organic urns. First it was baked in-house, later in a small oven in the warehouse of our funeral company. When it became clear that our ambitions were being surpassed by the means needed to keep production running, we set up a small workshop."

The family business now employs eight people and the bio-urns are distributed all over the world. However, one thing has not changed, because the urns are still completely handmade and every urn is, therefore 'one of a kind'.

To produce the biodegradable urns, sand, plant extracts, (sea) salt, natural resin and beeswax are used, and the production process is completely natural and without the use of harmful substances. The urns can be used to bury the ashes in the earth or for a funeral at sea. "In this way, the ashes are entrusted back to nature in a symbolic and environmentally-friendly way", Requena concludes.

BIO-URNS | ART PETER

BIO ART PETER

Father Gerhard, mother Kornelia and their three children form the basis of Art Peter. A family business par excellence, which produces urns from 100% natural materials, inspired by nature and the Austrian Alps.

Tradition, innovation, and kinship meet in this family business, which develops organic products with heart and soul that make a valuable contribution to a worthy farewell. Mother Kornelia runs the company and Gerhard provides innovative ideas in the field of design and materials.

The two are supported in this by their children Lukas, Harald, and Corinna, who are responsible for logistics, marketing, sales and graphic design. Everyone with his or her own skills and interests contributes to the development of the bio-urns. These are fully biodegradable, packaged in recycled packaging material, and can be provided with a final message by pencil.

"It is important for us to maintain a continuous dialogue with the market," says Kornelia. To know what is going on with the loved ones, to build up long-term and close relationships and to develop ourselves further together with the market on that basis."

BIO-URNS | PASSAGES INTERNATIONAL

BIO PASSAGES INTERNATIONAL

"Passages" is a symbolic name. One that represents the final journey of our lost loved ones. Using the power of the ritual as the basis for transformation and comfort. And with that to celebrate, honour and remember the lived life.

"Passages is a family business par excellence," said Darren Crouch, President, and founder of the company. "Together we combine more than 75 years of experience in the funeral industry and our family has been serving the communities of New Mexico and southern Colorado for more than 50 years, and now worldwide. We are proud that in 1999 we were one of the founders of the development of green funeral products, a still fast-growing trend, which has penetrated to the very roots of our existence.

Hence, we offer a wide range of sustainably produced and biodegradable products. Urns made from recycled, handmade paper, produced according to a completely natural process, and transported with as few transportation kilometres as possible. Moreover, it is packaged in organic and recycled materials, and with an eye for recycling waste. All this resulted in, among other things, the appointment of Green America as an officially socially and socially responsible organization. And as a member of the Green Burial Council, we partner with other organizations to make funerals more meaningful, modest, and sustainable.

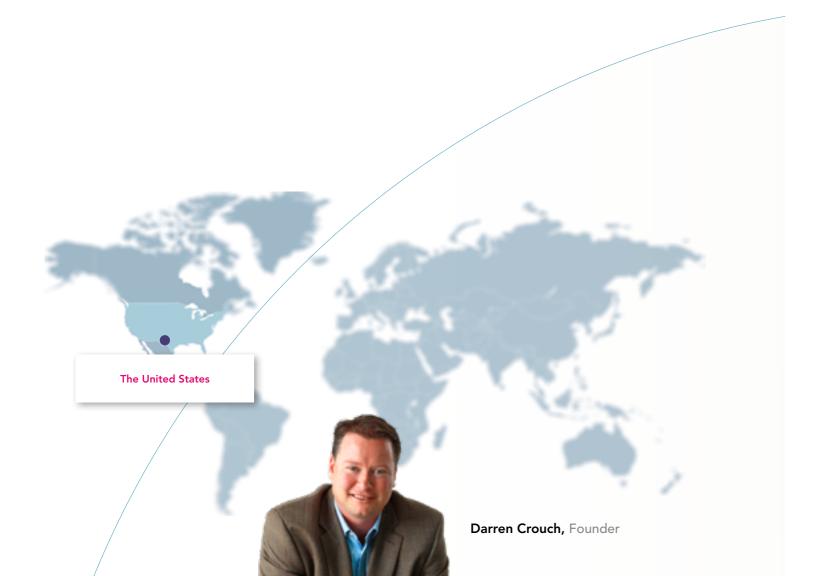

The Passages urns are not only friendly to the environment but are also characterised by their sublime design, where the power of simplicity does its job.

MARBLE URNS | EASTERN STONE MARBLE URNS | EASTERN STONE

MARBLE EASTERN STONE

Marble is a commonly used material in the funeral industry and a natural product full of character. After all, each block of natural stone has its own colour shades, crystal structure and veins. Each marble urn is therefore unique in its kind.

The Pakistani company Eastern Stone started producing urns in 1992 and in charge is Muhammad Afzal. "Working with marble runs in the family. My father worked in a marble factory for a total of 36 years and I also fell under the spell of the unique properties of the material. Although we now have 47 people working for us, I still go into the mines myself to select the marble, and I make almost all the designs myself. My Master of Arts background comes in very handy, but it is mainly my emotion that determines what an urn will eventually look like."

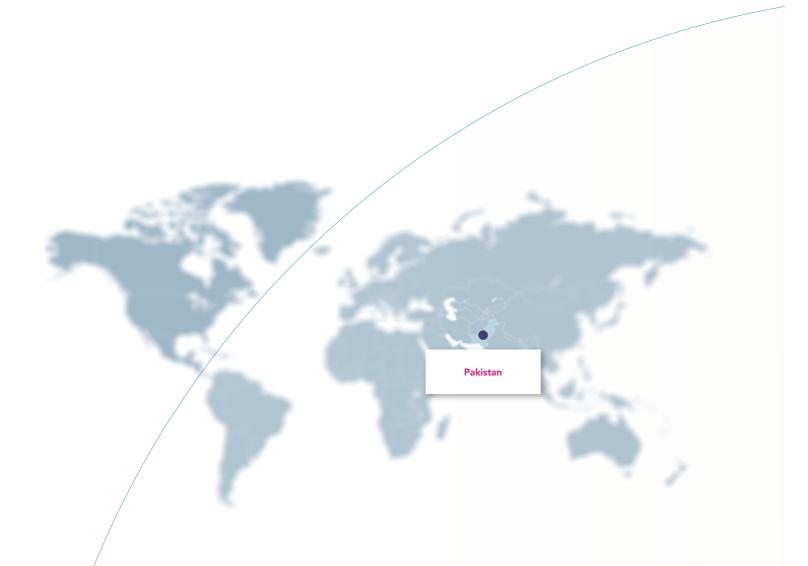

The high-quality marble used in Eastern Stone urns comes from Asian quarries. Here, large blocks of natural stone are cut and then processed with special moulds to realize the design of the urn. In addition, the production process is organized in a sustainable and socially responsible manner. The urns are packed in recycled paper and wood and then transported in an environmentally friendly manner. Furthermore, the company is in possession of the child-labour-free production certificate, which promotes the development of local youth and their immediate environment.

STAINLESS STEEL AMTO MEMORY PRODUCTS

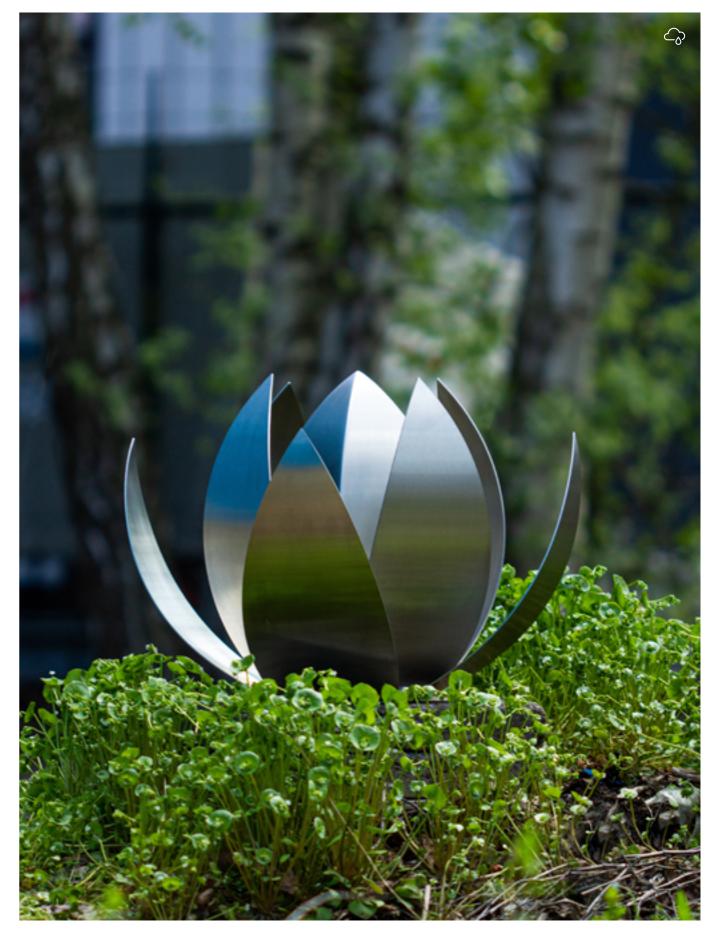

Remembering lost loved ones with beauty and appreciation is the goal of AMTO Memory Products, which is founded in 2003. A company that uses the latest techniques and materials to manufacture high-quality urns and metal memorial products.

AMTO Memory Products started as a sole proprietorship but quickly grew into a team of enthusiastic, experienced craftsmen and professionals. Founder and owner Marcel Timmers explains: "From a young age I was busy drawing, painting and designing, and although my heart was with art, my passion lies within technology. I followed a training there, after which I started working as a medical instrument-toolmaker for Erasmus University and Quooker. Despite this sidestep, my love for art has never gone away. After fourteen years of working in the field of technology, I decided to change my life drastically. I quit my job and started my own company."

In the early years, Marcel was mainly focused on gaining experience and developing his own style, and he worked for various designers and artists. Now many years later, Marcel has found that style.

Abstract art and realism alternate effortlessly in modern designs. The result is a beautiful, practical, and maintenance-friendly collection of urns and applied art objects made of stainless steel, characterized by aesthetics and uniqueness. Marcel only uses the high-quality stainless steel 316 for his products. "This alloy is resistant to all weather influences and is itself resistant to seawater," he explains.

ASH JEWELLERY ATLANTIS MEMORIALS

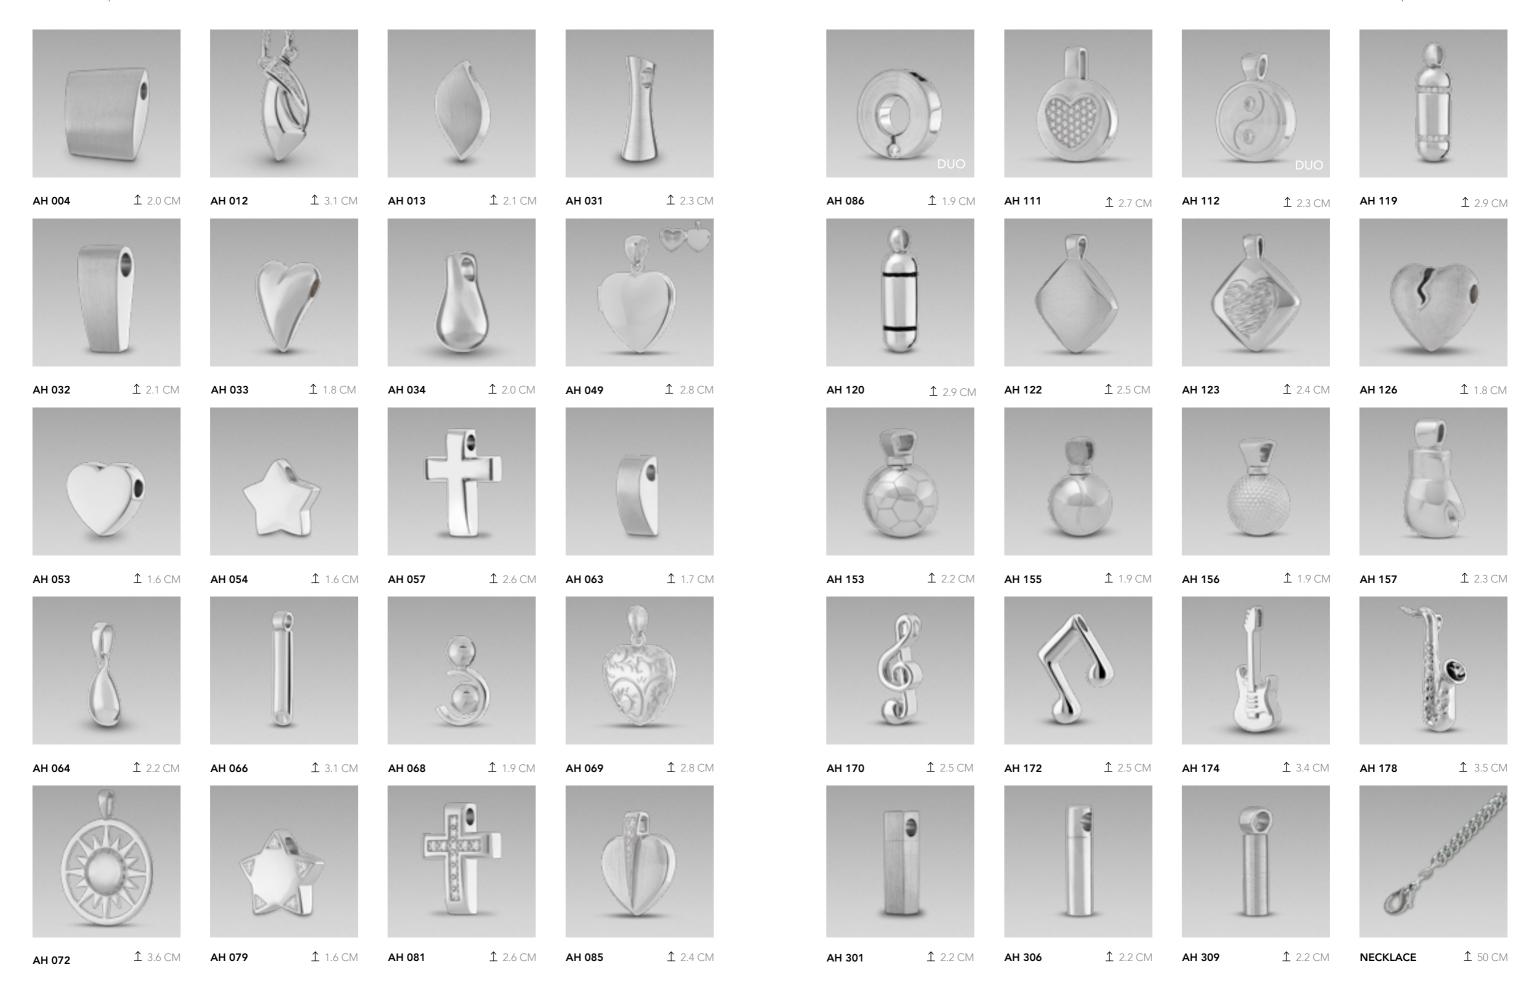

Around the year 2000, the Dutch company Atlantis Memorials was one of the first to enter the market for memorial jewellery, and it set the tone with subtly designed ash jewellery, in which a symbolic amount of ash could be carried discretely.

Now, some twenty years later, the perfect finish with an eye for design and details remains central. "Our memorial jewellery is made by hand by the best goldsmiths," adds founder and designer Jan Renes. "Varying from ash jewellery and fingerprint jewellery to ash charms and necklaces, but always true craftsmanship and using first-class materials. All commemorative jewellery is cast in precious metal, making it sturdy, robust, and heavy. For this, we only use high-quality 925 Sterling silver or 14 or 18 karat yellow or white gold." All this in a contemporary and timeless design, and designed with attention and care, so that relatives can carry their beautiful memories with them for as long as possible.

A unique part of the collection is the so-called "Fingerprint jewellery". "Using a digital fingerprint, the print is engraved deep into the jewellery by a special laser", Renes continues his story. "In addition, each piece of jewellery is provided with an extra layer of silver or gold to finish and reinforce it. The end result is an authentic, elegant and personal piece of jewellery. This collection also includes jewellery that can be filled with ashes, so that the personal memory of a lost loved one comes forward even more."
