Museum Newsletter

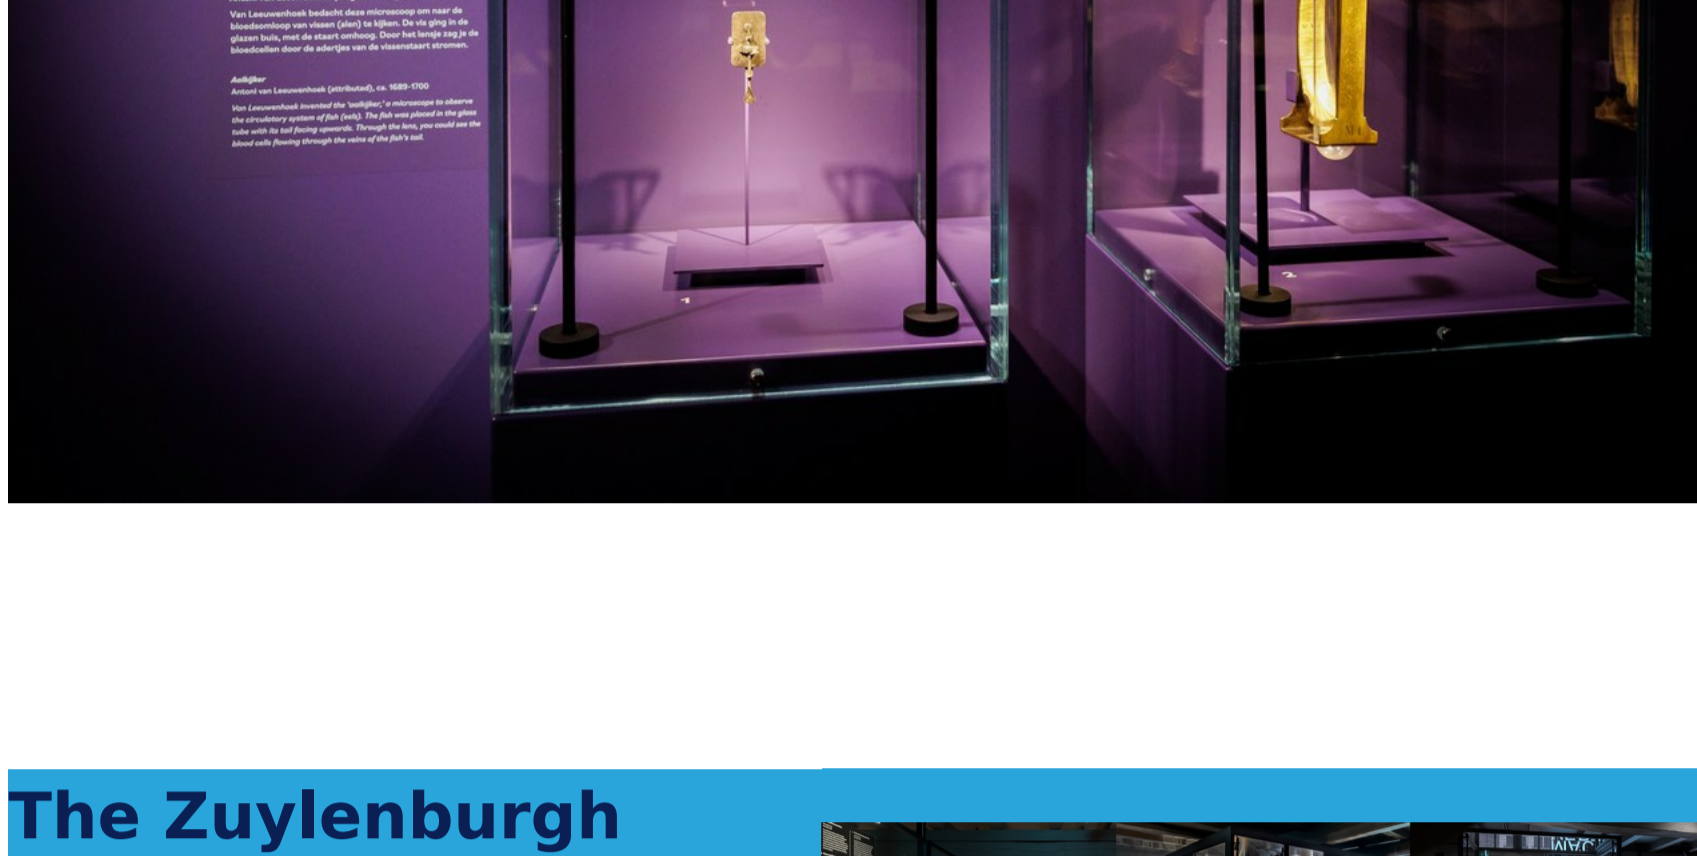

Especially for our museums, we have prepared a newsletter to showcase our stories in display cabinets. We, along with these museums, take pride in what we have created together. We would also like to demonstrate that through the stories below.

If you have plans to renovate your museum soon or in the future, or if you want to expand your existing collection, feel free to get in touch with us. Together, we can explore the possibilities for your museum.

Project Exhibition "Onvoorstelbaar" at Rijksmuseum Boerhaave

We are proud to announce that as SDB Vitrinebouw, we have supplied glass bell jars for the "Unimaginable" exhibition at Rijksmuseum Boerhaave. This exhibition, which was inaugurated on April 17, 2023, by the State Secretary for Culture and Media, Gunay Uslu, and astronaut André Kuipers, highlights the scientific discoveries that have paved the way for today's technological advancements. It is an honor for us to see our bell jars play such a prominent role in this significant exhibition.

The Zuylenburgh Collection

Showcase story #5

"The showcase is centrally positioned in the room, from floor to ceiling, making it almost an architectural element"

Poland, October 1543. The Catholic clergyman Nicolaus Copernicus publishes the book "On the Revolutions of the Celestial Spheres." In it, he proposes that the Earth is not the center of the universe, but rather the planets revolve around the sun...

Whimsical Historical Fools

Showcase story #6

Oosterhout, February 12, 1956. In the Brabant city of Oosterhout (Easterwood del Carnavallo), under the leadership of Prince Mienus 1 and his Council of Eleven, the first public carnival kicks off. The residents have, among others, Leo Wellens to thank for this, as the founder of the Oosterhout Carnival Society, the Smulnarren, received the green light to celebrate the beginning of Lent in a festive manner. On the streets this time.

"The fun starts at one o'clock; let the merriment begin," says the program written in the newspaper....

The Orient Express Greatness in Miniature

Showcase story #7

Paris, October 4, 1883. The Orient Express is officially inaugurated. At 7:30 p.m., the steam train departs from the Parisian Gare de Strasbourg for a 76-hour journey to the Bulgarian port city of Varna. On board are distinguished guests, journalists, and Belgian engineer Georges Nagelmackers.

The luxury train, affordable only to the wealthiest, has been running for several months, but with the inauguration, Nagelmackers' dream truly becomes a reality. After years of lobbying and hard work, he has achieved it with his railway company Compagnie Internationale des Wagons-Lits: international train travel across Europe is now possible.
